The grand jury Friday returned an indictment for first degree murder against Otto Roeder, who is now out on bond following the killing of Harry Love at Wyatt last month. VICTIM OF WAR STRANDED HERE

Rudolph S. Schmitt Had to Leave London When Trouble Started.

Who is going to be a good samaritan to Rudolph Schmitt? Rudolph struck South Bend three days ago, penniless, hungry and tired. He slept in the park two nights looking for someone who could speak his language, and Thursday night the rain drove him indoors.

He went to the Y. M. C. A. and they gave him a room for the night. Today the social secretary, William Nitsche, is assisting him in finding friends.

Schmitt came to this country when the war broke out. He was in London at the time and received a letter from his mother at his home in Brenburg, which is on the border line between Austria and Hungary, stating that trouble was brewing and that he must leave immediately. He also received $5 in money.

He went to Dover to seek a ship that would carry him back to his own country. There was none. So he hastened to Liverpool and embarked on the Lusitania, securing passage in the steerage. He left his 10 companions with whom he was traveling there. They were all students at Vienna and were making a visit to England. They had one more year in which to complete their law courses.

Once in New York he sought work. There was none to be had at first. His funds got low, but finally because of his education he secured employment with Dr. Pelesco, the New York consul, as an under secretary.

Nine months he worked at this, then his duties as correspondent were lightened. The letters that he had to write became less frequent. The result was that he lost his job.

Again he searched for employment. He had no knowledge of the English language. He paid his lodging and board for two weeks after his funds ran out by pawning his clothes and selling his jewelry, including the large watch that his father had given him in honor of his entrance to the "gymnasium." He then began sleeping in a city park, where a policeman discovered him one night and took him to the police station.

The officer told him to leave. Rudolph did not understand what he was talking about. The policeman pushed him off the bench. There he lay, weakened from exposure and hunger. He stayed for eight days. The doctors at the hospital made up a purse. He secured a ticket for Pittsburgh. A series of incidents and good fortune kept him going until he arrived in South Bend.

Rudolph is enroute to Milwaukee. He has a sister living there. He does not know her address, but he has written home for that and for other news of the time, but never did he have a reply.

So the Y. M. C. A. took him under their wing. They will attempt to secure aid for him. They will at least send him on to Chicago, where the Chicago association will take him in charge. They have telegraphed the Milwaukee "Y" asking that they locate the sister if possible.

Rudolph is well educated. He speaks the highest German fluently. One more day he will be in South Bend, but Saturday he goes on his way.

Who is to be the good samaritan?

IT WAS SOME APPETITE

Lone Man Almost Depletes Supply of Food at Stand.

Supplying the needs of the individual consumer is generally a hefty proposition. One of the lunch booths at the fair is giving special illustrations. It issued one lone lean lone chap to stow away—at one sitting, or standing—six ham sandwiches, three egg sandwiches, two cups of coffee, big piece of apple pie, huge chunk of cake, heaping dish of ice cream, and the contents of a bottle of root beer. There wasn't a thing left on the counter but the drained-dry sup and bottle and the slicked-up saucer.

HI SIBLEY BACK HOME

Local Man Returns After Visiting War Zone.

"Hi" Sibley's back. He rushed into The News-Times office Friday afternoon and passed around a hand grip that certainly felt as though he had been steering war ambulances with vim or pulling some hefty triggers the past few months.

"Hi" left for France early last spring. He enlisted in the Red Cross service and got himself admitted to some interesting situations from which he has returned to South Bend unscathed, in fact, a trifle heartier looking than he was when he went away.

The News-Times readers have enjoyed Mr. Sibley's stories of his experiences from time to time during the summer and will be much interested in the story of his return trip, which will appear in Sunday's paper—red hot from the front.
